All-Inclusive Honeymoon Ideas

On your post-wedding vacation, you'll want to be whispering sweet nothings to your new husband, not haggling loudly over prices with vendors. Book an all-inclusive trip, and you won't have to deal with such mundane issues as monitoring cash flow, since you'll be shelling out for the whole shebang -- rooms, meals, drinks -- up front.

Here, we've identified the best resorts, cruise lines, tour operators, and safari outfitters for every type of personality. But first, a warning: Beware of hidden fees. "At some places, they're part of the business model," says Howard Green, chief executive officer of MoonRings, a travel service specializing in honeymoons.

Call to ask what's not included, or consider only mid- to high-end companies; they're more likely to include everything, even gratuities. Once you've decided on the right all-inclusive for you, kick back and enjoy -- after all, it's paid for!

SAFARIS

They're pricey, but repeat after us: once in a lifetime. Itineraries generally include three or four parks and daily game drives in search of the "big five" -- lions, leopards, buffalo, rhinos, and elephants. Oh, my!

BUDGET

8 days in Tanzania, $3,598 per couple

The "Duma" safari by ZAFRIKA includes four stops in its traditional trek across Tanzania's north. One of the best places in Africa for wildlife viewing, the second stop -- the 5,700-square-foot Serengeti National Park -- plays a major role in the "great migration," when 1.6 million wildebeest trek over from Kenya. Along with the Serengeti, the Ngorongoro Crater (a collapsed volcano) is the longest stop, and for good reason: 30,000 animals live on its floor. On the crater's eastern rim, guests can relax in a lodge that, like most of the trip's hotels, features balconies and sunset-bright colors. The "Duma" package starts at $1,799 per person, plus airfare. (Any safari that costs less than $250 per person per day should be considered only by "people looking for a more rustic and adventurous experience," says Green.)
